

Rocket Fails To Orbit Balloon Moon Sphere

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The United States had its busiest day of rocketry Friday since it began reaching for space. But the main effort failed—an attempt to send a 12-foot inflatable balloon into orbit.

The Juno II rocket roared spaceward from Cape Canaveral, Fla., bearing the unusual balloon moon. Its three stages lit successfully, but the last one apparently went in the wrong direction and carried the satellite back into the earth's atmosphere.

Another failure was a glancing "Titan" missile that blew up on its launching pad at the Cape Canaveral in the day.

On the plus side at Cape Canaveral was a successful launching of a Polaris missile from a three-million dollar machine that simulates the motion of a submarine at sea. The weapon is designed to be fired from a submarine anywhere in the world.

At Vandenberg Air Force Base, Calif., a British Air Force training crew successfully launched a 1,500 mile Thor missile, the kind

Then, as now, there arose legal controversy, and in a particular time it dealt with an area called Giles Addition. Was it part of the City of Hope or not? After petitions and legal hassles it was decided that the original petition had been erroneous and the Giles Addition was part of Hope all the time. Everything was finally settled on August 26, 18

The first plot for the town covered 17 full blocks and two fractions of blocks and the first sale of lots was on August 28, 1873—year and a half before Hope an incorporated city.

Through we have had numerous additions of land to our lot through its 83 years of existence the first petition to annex property to Hope was filed on August 1882. At least, it was the earliest I could find.

Was it significant that the first addition came a lucky seven years

Today, there are thousands of folks in the City of Hope, Ark. who are very glad there were 50 qualified voters here at 1 and that a majority of them signed a petition to make us an incorporated town.

Beats Parking Meter the Hard Way

MORRISTOWN, N. J. (AP)—Arnold Sprinz beat a $1 over-the-counter parking ticket in Municipal Court Thursday with the aid of a transistorized stethoscope, a temperature-humidity sensitive tape, and an electronic "brain."

Sprinz, 28, an aeronautical engineer offered the results of his precision monitoring equipment

In Hawaii, Air Force planes equipped with dangling trapeze devices tried to snare a capsule returning to earth from the satellite Discoverer V, which was the first to orbit Thursday from the West Coast base. They failed to get a sight of the capsule.

had gone into orbit, it would have been the third successful U.S. satellite to circle the earth in a week. Last Friday a Thor-Able rocket shoved a 142-pound "paddlewheel" satellite into orbit, which still is radiating back important space information.

The balloon-moon was designed to show just how much drag the super-thin atmosphere up to an altitude of 1,000 miles or so would have on such a large, light object.

It was to be the forerunner of other balloon satellites as big as a house. These are to be used to set up a worldwide communications network by bouncing radio signals off them.

Planes Trying to Find Nose Cone

WASHINGTON (AP) — A planes assigned to the attempt catch the capsule from the Discoverer V satellite began taking off from Hickam Air Force Base, Hawaii, at 1:30 p.m. (EST) today, the Air Force announced.

"This decision (whether to attempt aerial recovery) should be known within a few hours," the Air Force said.

Humphrey to Enter Wisconsin Primary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Herbert M. Humphrey of Minnesota said today he plans to enter the Wisconsin Democratic presidential primary next April 5.

Typhoon Rips Through Japan

TOKYO (AP) — Typhoon Gilda ripped today through central Honshu, Japan's main island, leaving 33 persons dead, 51 missing, 179 injured and 69,144 driven from their homes. The storm brought torrential rains and floods to Tokyo but the capital escaped the main force of the blow.

Help Reaches Flood Victims in Austria

VIENNA (AP) — Soldiers and army engineers struggled today to reach isolated villages in the provinces of Salzburg and upper Austria as the Austrian nation mobilized to aid the victims of its worst flood disaster in memory. Seven persons were known dead and hundreds homeless. The city and province of Salzburg were hardest hit.

Bible Comment

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D.D.
Recently I wrote of history repeating itself in Israel today is much the same way when the Israelites fought for the "Promised Land" nearly 3,300 years ago.

Another interesting circumstance is revival of interest in the Book of Job, in a play, "J.B." by the poet Archibald MacLeish.

The play, obviously suggested by the Biblical Book of Job, deals with the same problem of loss, suffering, and tragedy in a modern setting. It has been hailed by critics as a masterpiece, and considering its theme, it has had an immense success as a stage play on Broadway.

I am not competent to deal with the modern play in relation to its great counterpart, but the problem with which both deal is the greatest that confronts every thoughtful person, "J.B." or its family aspect, concerns the outlook on the whole order of nature and man.

The poet Tennyson faced the problem in "nature red in tooth and claw" (in Memoriam) but "thrift somehow used will be the final goal of it." But Mark Twain, that his later years, at least, ended in incorrigible pessimism.

The contrasts in respect to tragic experience are great and striking. I suppose that there are many millions like myself, whose lives have been comparatively free from suffering. But there are many other millions whose lives have been so burdened with injustice and tragedy that the very record of it makes one shiver.

It is not that I haven't been near enough to tragedy to know what it means. Years ago in a cheap Paris theater, where we had gone to see Sarah Bernhardt, my wife and I were caught in a fire panic from which we had little hope of coming out alive. It turned out next day that the actual danger was more from the sudden stampede and the bullet-like rush for the exits than from the explosion of a light bulb under the gallery.

It is strange what goes through one's mind at such a time, and so strange as it may seem, I recall truthfully that a chief thought was for my good Puritan father: "What will he think when he hears I lost my life in a Paris theater?"

I recall too, when I and my family barely escaped from being hit at a railroad crossing on the road between Oshkosh and Fond du Lac, Wis., as, through an unfortunate circumstance though no fault of my own, a train bore down upon us.

But as I say, I am among the millions for whom the way and ways of life have been comparatively pleasant. I have suffered deeply at times, it has been vicariously as have watched others suffer.

One may quote what the famous Edmund Gosse wrote, as he witnessed, before the days of anesthetics, the torturing of his mother, a victim I think of cancer:

"The flood of the tears meet and gather
The sound of it all grows like thunder,
O, into what bosom I wonder,
Is poured the whole sorrow years.
For eternally only seems keeping
Account of the deep humor weeping."

May God then, the Maker and Father,
May He find a place for the tears!"

Because Hope Star's electronic engraving machine copies photographs on a one-to-one scale all pictures submitted for publication in the Society Page—such as engagement and wedding announcements—must conform to the following rules:

WIDTH — 4 1/4 inches (allowing 1/4 inch for cropping, to make a 2-column plate 4 inches wide. Standard 8x10 prints can not be used. Your studio on request will furnish you a print 4 1/4 inches wide.

GLOSSY black-and-white prints give the best newspaper reproduction. Semi-matte and screen prints will be accepted, however. But colored or tinted prints are forbidden, as they make for inferior printing.

FREE PUBLICATION is given Society portraits, therefore the Star feels it is only just that the above rule on picture size be enforced.

ON PICTURES originating outside where it is impossible to obtain a print of correct size The Star will by special arrangement undertake to re-photograph 8x10's to bring them down to 4 1/4 inch width — but there will be a 50¢ charge for this, and The Star reserves the right to cancel this arrangement without notice, if it interferes with production schedule on news pictures.

COMPARISON OF STARTING SALARIES OF WOMEN COLLEGE GRADUATES

HERE'S MONEY IN IT—Each year most of the women radiating from American colleges go out and get jobs. And each year they do better financially. Newschart shows the starting salaries received by recent graduates. According to the U. S. Department of Labor, 76 per cent of these graduates get jobs, including nearly 75 per cent of the married ones. Graduates who married within six months of graduation rose from

Gal Sings Birthday Blues Thinking About 22 Guests

By DOROTHY DIX

Dear Dorothy Dix: Birthdays should be happy occasions. I have become a horror to me because of family complications. When I was married 15 years ago, I was told it was a custom in my husband's family for every one to be invited to all birthdays. I followed tradition and when my sisters-in-law married, they did the same. Now, however, the family has grown so much that it is almost impossible for any one of us to have the whole gang. My birthday is coming up, I've been through a long siege of illness and hospitals during the past year and, frankly, I don't feel up to entertaining 22 people. I have four children, which means that six times a year I'm scheduled to have the crowd. I think my sisters-in-law agree with me but we haven't nerve enough to break with tradition. — Maggie

Dear Maggie: It's a gracious thing to observe family customs. But when the letter of the law spirit is lost, it's time for revision. Invite the ladies of the family for ice-cream and cookie party some afternoon. Tell them you think the situation warrants a family caucus. Let everyone air her opinion and I'm sure you'll be able to end the confusion. You'll be the heroine of the hour for barging in where others feared to tread.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My husband and I have started to build our first home. It has changed him from a happy, patient individual to an irritable one. He gets angry

"I ask him anything about the house, seems to resent any suggestion I offer and doesn't even play with the baby any more. — Gilda

Dear Gilda: Your husband has embarked on a most frustrating project and apparently you have no idea of the problems involved. I suggest that you park the baby with a willing relative, get your self a hammer and join hubby on the job. You'll soon find out why he's irritable and, instead of being impatient with him, you'll marvel that he has kept his sanity. For just keeping track of all the building laws is a job in itself. Join in the problems; be a partner and you'll appreciate husband and home as you never would otherwise.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My girl friend and I invited two boys to a party. Should we go by and after us? T.W.

Dear T.W.: Your obligation ended when you invited the boys. From there on, they must be the same mannerly escorts they would be if you were the invited guests.

were expected from his works. Of the many Portland houses open to the public, my favorite is the 1850 Victoria Mansion on Danforth Street. Distinction stems from the elegance of detail: silver door knobs, some 300 carved balusters supporting the mahogany stair rails, ornate pianos, marble mantles and a living room with hand-painted roses on the ceiling.

The L. D. M. Sweet Museum, a wing added to the General Joshua Wingate House (built around 1800) on High Street, has year old Belgian tapestries and many treasures. There are 400-appealed paintings of John Singer Sargent, Gilbert Stuart and Douglas Volk.

Sturdy Symbol
The Magic Circle out of Portland provides a delightful automobile trip, as you swing south (Maine 77) to Cape Elizabeth, at the lower tip of Casco Bay. Pictures of the turbulent waves and the Portland Head Light are so familiar that you have a strange sense of return when you make your first visit. George Washington ordered this lighthouse built in 1790, and it stands as the oldest warning to mariners now in operation on the Atlantic coast. Sturdy symbol of Maine, it has been photographed and painted thousands of times; you probably have seen it on playing cards, in museums and on calendars.

In contrast is Old Orchard Beach, an amusement-packed strip along a wide sandy stretch of the rolling Atlantic Ocean. From here begins a gamut of beaches, each maintaining its own personality: Goose Rock, where knowing families come to enjoy the warmest of Maine's surf; Cape Porpoise, for lobster catching; Kennebec and Kennebec, where fishermen and lobstermen are on the watch for the season's first catch of fish.

Ongunquit's Indian name is translated "Oh! camera, quick," by the modern humor. It is idyllic by artists, many of whom have been unable to leave this beauty spot. The sugar-like sand, topped by grassy dunes, and the wave-beaten rocks are set against a background of white pines. Here is the New England of clipped speech and behavior, where no one utters two words when one will do.

Colorful Museum
A winding road (U. S. 1A) hugs the shoreline enroute to swank York Beach and the history-aware little city of York. The road passes Old Goal, one time combination 1653 jail, sheriff's residence, courtroom and dungeon; now a well-organized museum. Ladies in colonial-day gowns are posted in the old stage and weathered wood building to explain the uses for the heirlooms that regional families have put on display. The huge dough tray for making prisoners' bread, different shaped irons for doing dress ruffles, cheese press and candle molds are in place in the kitchen. The sheriff's parlor and tea room is warmly cozy with a red brick corner fireplace and luster china. The original wide floor boards have been so worn that the knots protrude.

South at Kittery is the Portsmouth Naval Shipyard where craftsmen design, construct and repair submarines. If you cross the bridge into Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and turn left onto Pierce Island, you often can get a view across the river of one of the gray monsters tied up at dock. And of the chute where others may take their leave. The waters of Great Bay and Salmon Falls River empty here to create what is said to be the second swiftest current in the world.

Portsmouth itself is a treasure trove of fine Early American homes, distinguished by the delicate wood carving and by the skill and good taste of the local ship carpenters. There is the Historical Society headquarters, where Captain John Paul Jones boarded in 1779 at the age of 21 while his ship, the "America," was being fitted out in the harbor. Of particular charm to me was the Moffat-Todd House, where Captain Moffat could look down from his second-floor ship room in the wharves and watch his ships sailing out to the four corners of the globe.

The Magic Circle curves north (Maine 103) to South Berwick, then joins Maine 4 to Sanford, where they make rugs and little seaplanes. Nearby lakes and wooded hills make this a center for nirvana and fishermen, although it basically is an industrial city. The season for bow and arrow hunting starts early, and by summer the numbers of wild life again have become so plentiful as to be bold. When merchants held their Dollar Day Sale last year, a deer joined the crowd walking along the sidewalk to window shop. But our biggest surprise came one night at the drive-in movie when the screen seemed to take on a stereo dimension — a sour-faced, belligerent mouse was wandering about in front of the screen.

Asks Action on Behalf of Citizens

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—A Little Rock segregationist today asked the United States Attorney General's office to act on his charges of insurrection and treason against persons who broke up a racial demonstration Wednesday.

Dewey J. Coffman, 33-year-old businessman, said in a telegram to the Attorney General's office that an assistant attorney general at Little Rock had refused to act on his petition.

Coffman, a member of the segregationist Capital Citizens Council said he filed the petition with the office of U. S. Atty. Gen. Omar Cobb yesterday.

He said Walter C. Riddick, assistant to Cobb, refused action. Neither Riddick nor Cobb was available.

In the telegram Coffman, said, the bridge into Portsmouth, New Hampshire, and turn left onto Pierce Island, you often can get a view across the river of one of the gray monsters tied up at dock. And of the chute where others may take their leave. The waters of Great Bay and Salmon Falls River empty here to create what is said to be the second swiftest current in the world.

THE STORY: After being tricked and disarmed by Rutt Dubison and his lawless riders of the Beaverhead ranch, Deputy Sheriff Grady Haskell gets Joe Peele's shotgun, returns to the saloon, and after shooting one man disarms the rest and gun-whips Dubison. The Beaverhead hands are completely subdued by Haskell's anger.

XVIII
Haskell put his back to the bar, so that he might sweep the room with the threat of the Greener. "All right," he told the balance of the Beaverhead crowd, "you're leaving, now. Get Dubison on his horse, take that other one, too." His glance briefly touched the dead man.

Surly and dangerous, they did as they were told. A couple of them hoisted Dubison to his feet, led him stumbling and blindly weaving into the night. Others carried out the pack-marked one. The last one of the gang to leave, paused short of the door and made sullen demand.

"What about our guns?"

"You haven't got any," Haskell told him coldly.

Haskell closed the door, turned back. Art Orcen, with another bucket of water and a mop, came from behind the bar and set to work on the floor.

come into these hills just for the ride." He centered on Sandy Lee. "A little ago said that all you wanted was to get clear of this place before Dubison and his outfit threw trouble your way. What was that supposed to mean?"

The grizzled rider shrugged. "It's no secret that Hayfork and the Beaverhead crowd don't mix. Had I known they were due to hit town tonight, I'd have been long gone by the time they arrived. But, all of a sudden, in the night, they showed up."

"Last night," Haskell said, "out there in the street I took a pretty mean roughing around by Hayfork riders. You have a hand in it?"

Reply was quick and emphatic. "I did not! I wasn't even in town last night."

"Yet, yesterday, you trailed me all the way in from Rancher Creek?"

"That's right, I did," Sandy admitted steadily.

"After which you returned to headquarters with the word where I'd ended up—which was here in Reservation?"

"That's right," Sandy repeated. "But I didn't sit a saddle again until today."

Bleakly musing, Haskell searched through the scatter of weapons along the bar, found his own gun, checked and hoisted it. Again he turned to Sandy Lee. "Obliged for your help. But in your boots, after what Dubison said, I'd ride all trails pretty careful."

"Maybe, after a while, the idea will get around that I didn't."

Amos Potter eyed the freshly scrubbed area, then slowly spoke. "When they rode out, there was one tied across his saddle. Which one?"

"I wouldn't know his name," Haskell said.

"It was Rudy Sheed," supplied Art Over heavily. "He didn't show no sense at all."

Jim Kineen was looking over the guns on the bar.

"Now there is a fine collection of hardware. Just what will you do with it, Haskell?"

"Turn it into scrap metal. You got a forge around your stable?"

"There's a small one out back, used to shoe a horse now and then."

"God enough—I'll use it in the morning. Orcen, you got some place where these guns will keep until then?"

"If I lock them in my liquor room they'll be safe enough."

Ike Is Taking Credit for Dulles' Policy

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower is putting himself in the position of having to share the credit — or the blame — for practically everything the late Secretary of State John Foster Dulles did or said.

Through remarks at his news conferences and elsewhere, the President is painting a picture of his relationship with Dulles that shows the two men seeing eye to eye on everything before Dulles announced it.

But, as it turned out, Dulles became a kind of lightning rod and shield for the President, since most of the criticism of American foreign policy during Dulles' years in office was directed at him, not at Eisenhower.

The following can be said confidently to represent the President's recollections of his secretary:

Dulles never made a pronouncement without Eisenhower's signature, initials or approval. Dulles was scrupulous in insisting the President approve every action taken. Eisenhower reacts strongly to any suggestion they were ever apart.

It was in the latter part of 1953 — with East and West in a cold war growing colder — that Eisenhower and Dulles decided they needed something different, or as Eisenhower put it as his news conference this week:

"We began to feel that the methods we were pursuing had to be reinforced by something a little differently than we had been doing up to this moment."

That is the end — in this story — of Eisenhower's recollections.

There can be no doubt Dulles was far better informed on foreign affairs than the President. Eisenhower had spent a lifetime soldiering. Dulles has spent his life in diplomacy and law.

Eisenhower never pretended he did not depend on Dulles to handle details.

The President, besides repeatedly saying Dulles was the greatest Secretary of State in his memory, once said he had "acquired a wisdom and experience and knowledge that I think is possessed by no man — no man in the world."

From this it seems safe to assume Dulles was Eisenhower's guide in the foreign affairs jungle, that he therefore greatly influenced the President, and that it was natural for Eisenhower, who so respected his wisdom, to accept his ideas.

There never seemed much question it was Dulles who dominated American foreign policy. But Eisenhower and Dulles were not innovators. Their foreign policy was not original with them. They inherited it from the Truman-Acheson administration.

Simply put, this was it: stiff-armed the Soviets and keep them surrounded with military bases and alliances to discourage Soviet aggression.

But, since Eisenhower depended so much on Dulles, it might seem that after Dulles' death in May Eisenhower was forced to rely more on himself, and as a result became much more free-wheeling. His decision to invite Premier Nikita Khrushchev here might be

Air Force to Try to Catch Nose Capsule

VANDENBERG AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — A fantastic game of catch will be played thousands of feet above the Pacific today if all goes well with satellite Discoverer V.

The object: to snare the satellite's ejected 300-pound nose capsule.

Discoverer V blasted off its launching pad at noon Thursday. It is circling the earth every 9 minutes, sending back, loud clear signals.

Eight C119 Flying Boxcars are poised on Hawaii for the attempt to catch the instrument-packed capsule as it floats down under a parachute near the islands.

The Air Force says the chance of success is about 1 in 1,000.

Here is how it proposes to snatch the capsule out of the air: As Discoverer V makes its 18th pass, a tracking station in Alaska will trigger the ejection mechanism. On the next pass, the satellite, repositioned by compressed gas jets, will tilt 60 degrees downward.

At the designated moment, explosive springs and bolts will separate the capsule from its vehicle, the 1,700-pound, automobile-size second stage of the rocket which bore it into space. The vehicle is expected to continue orbiting for about 10 days.

The capsule will be slowed down taken as an example. This is not necessarily proof of a more free-wheeling attitude on Eisenhower's part.

Just remember that he said he and Dulles, in late 1953, decided ferent. So this was a joint decision, not one by Eisenhower alone.

At most, inviting Khrushchev here — the evidence now known — is simply a switch in tactics in dealing with the Russians, not a change in strategy. Eisenhower to try something a "little" different in mind in 1953. But he is ferent.

Eisenhower has not said whether inviting Khrushchev here was the kind of charge Dulles had approved.

So American foreign policy as of now, including the invitation to Khrushchev, is still the Eisenhower-Dulles policy, not something new by Eisenhower.

Mitchell in Huddle With Rail Union

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell has been holding a series of private huddles with railroad union leaders in an apparent effort to try to head off a possible rail strike later this year.

The Labor Department confirmed that Mitchell met with four union chiefs Thursday in Cleveland. There have been earlier sessions and the secretary prominently also has been in contact with rail industry leaders.

Present rail contracts expire Nov. 1. The industry has demanded costly "featherbedding" practices. The unions have announced intent to get 12 to 15 per cent wage boosts.

Subpoena Is Served on McClellan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Detroit Teamsters union official William Bufalino had a subpoena served today on Sen. John L. McClellan (D-Ark.), chairman of the Senate rackets probes.

Bufalino has had some heated clashes with the committee in its investigations of the Teamsters. McClellan told a reporter he had been served with the subpoena this morning. It calls him to testify at a pretrial hearing Sept. 15 in a 3 1/2 million dollar federal suit against Bufalino and a group of relatives have filed here against the magazine.

McClellan said the subpoena called for him to produce "all unprivileged books, records, documents, data and other tangible matter" relating to issues in the case.

"I don't have any unprivileged documents that I know of," McClellan said, but added that he would respond to the subpoena. He said he assumed that "unprivileged" meant documents and other tangible matter not surrounded by congressional immunity from being subpoenaed unless the Senate consents.

Says Come

STOP, MAN!

...where goest thou? Your struggle is for naught. One can't run away from duty nor from God. The strong arm of conscience, the love of a friend or the power of God won't let one go.

Make no mistake: He is able to hold his children and bend their wills to His. This man is desperate because his aim is low.

He is a timid coward whose church attendance record is now non-existent. But wait, God can still perform miracles and does touch us on the shoulder every time we

It takes a touch on the shoulder from God to satisfy man in his last hour. Stop, right now!
